Dear Judy,

Thank you for performing your speech, "Getting What You Want Before You Forget What It Is!" You were a hit! Everyone loved you -- for the second time.

The first time you spoke for our group you were amazingly funny. So, my boss suggested bringing you back. At the end of our conference, everyone was tired from a long day of meetings and you burst onto the stage with tons of energy and got everyone laughing from beginning to end. Not only were you funny, but you left us with a positive message on how we can get what we want, rather than whining about what we don't have. The meeting was two weeks ago and people are still talking about how much they enjoyed you!

Thank you for working with our committee before hand and getting to know our challenges and acronyms. I loved how you worked specifics about our job stress into your speech. Everyone felt as if you knew us.

Best regards,
